

Species at Risk Public Registry

The Species at Risk Public Registry (www.sararegistry.gc.ca) is your source for news, information, and documents related to species at risk in Canada. This website has been designed to help you better understand Canada's approach to protecting and recovering species at risk, learn about species at risk and what's being done to help them, and get involved in decision making and recovery activities. On this site, you can: review Canada's strategy and legislation for protecting and recovering species; submit a comment on a document open for public consultation; sign up for our email newsletter to stay informed; learn about funding; or apply for a permit to carry out activities affecting species at risk.

Producers and others in the agricultural sector can have a direct impact on the recovery and management of species at risk by sharing their experience and knowledge of species when documents are open for public consultation. To receive notifications when recovery documents for species located in Ontario are posted to the website for comment, please email ec.eepontario-sarontario.ec@canada.ca with "add to list" in the subject line.
